

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE NIV?

(NEW INTERNATIONAL VERSION OF THE BIBLE)

TRANSLATION COMMITTEE

The NIV text is stewarded by the Committee on Bible Translation (CBT), an independent, global, and multi-denominational group of world-class evangelical biblical scholars.

- The CBT meets every year to monitor developments in biblical scholarship, archaeological discoveries, and changes in the English language. These developments are reflected in periodic updates to the NIV text.
- The CBT's ongoing and consistent attention to the NIV text is unique from any other translation committee.

COPYRIGHT HOLDER

Biblica is the copyright holder of the NIV, a nonprofit ministry that focuses on the work of Bible translation and provides access to the Bible across the globe.

- Biblica supports the translation philosophy of the NIV, which is to provide transparency to the original manuscripts along with ease of understanding in every verse.
- Biblica understands that, given the very nature of the English language and the changes that occur over time, this work is never complete and demands ongoing attention to keep the text accurate, readable, and clear to the reader.

PRINT & DISTRIBUTION

Biblica licenses commercial publishing rights of the NIV to two entities: Zondervan for distribution in the US and around the world, and to Hodder & Stoughton in the UK.

- The publisher's responsibility is to print and distribute Bibles to retail partners across the globe.
- No commercial publisher has any control over the text of the NIV; this safeguards the text against any theological, ideological, or cultural bias.
